General Suggestions Regarding the Harvesting and Curing of Fire-Cured Tobacco

Because of the difference in crops, growing conditions, weather prevailing during different stages of curing, and other factors, it is not possible to make detailed recommendations regarding this phase of fire-cured tobacco production. A number of people interested in this type of tobacco feel that many growers could greatly improve the quality of their tobacco by adopting some of the curing procedures used by certain growers who consistently put high quality tobacco on the warehouse floor.

The following general recommendations are based on discussions with successful growers in several fire-cured producing counties:

1. CUTTING: Tobacco will be less brittle and you will have less breakage if you will delay cutting in the morning until after the dew is off and the tobacco has become soft and pliable. With most crops, put six plants on a stick. Some growers with large tobacco put only four plants per stick. The important point is — don't let your tobacco be over-crowded in the barn because you put too many plants on the sticks.

2. Scaffolding: Scaffolding in the field is a good practice. Under favorable weather conditions, scaffolded tobacco will be ready to hang in the barn in two days. By properly scaffolding you will have less bruised and broken tobacco and the work required in filling the barn will be greatly reduced because much moisture will be lost while the tobacco is on the scaffold. Also, the wilted tobacco will be easier to handle in the barn.

3. Filling the barn: Under most conditions sticks should be spaced eight inches apart on the tier poles. Fill each room from top to bottom. Avoid putting green tobacco under partially cured tobacco. Remember — overcrowding in the curing barn is one of the biggest mistakes made by many growers.

4. CURING: The first few days after housing is known as the yellowing period. If the weather is cool and the barn is open, the sticks of tobacco are sometimes pushed up close together as they are put in the barn and allowed to yellow; then they are spaced the proper distance for 'firing.' Another way to create desired humidity for yellowing is to wet the barn floor with two or three barrels of water. To prevent run-off, trenches are dug in the floor of the barn. Also, some growers increase humidity by applying wet sawdust to the barn floor.

Some growers complete the yellowing process with little or no firing. Others begin the yellowing stage by starting slow fires as soon as the barn is filled. During the yellowing period, it is important to have only smoldering fires with practically no blaze. Always use a large number of fires rather than a few large fires. Twenty-four small fires for a six room barn is recommended. These fires should be uniformly distributed throughout the barn. Avoid hot fires during the yellowing period. Such fires will "kill" the plants and result in a fixed green color.

Many successful growers prefer to use oak or hickory wood that is dead or slightly green. Gum that has started to decay is also satisfactory.

The next step in the curing process is to obtain and set the color. This is a most important phase in the curing process and requires much experience. During this period considerable humidity within the barn is essential so that the plant may become "in order" or "soft." When plants are "in order" the sap passes through the tissues and brings about a uniformity of color. This is known as "running" or sweating and should not be allowed to continue too long at one time or the tobacco will "houseburn" or rot. To prevent houseburn, it is essential that the temperature be held relatively high in relation to the humidity and that the fires be run long enough to drive out the moisture, not enough to dry the leaves, but just enough to keep down the excessive moisture. You can tell when to start the fires by the condition and odor of the leaves. Uncured tobacco, when high "in order" has an odor of decay, often referred to as a funky odor. Generally the process of "running" and drying out the plants has to be done several times before the desired color is secured. During this curing stage if fires become too hot, wet sawdust can be sprinkled on them. This will smolder the fires to the proper heat and at the same time create humidity.

When the leaf stem begins to turn yellow next to the stalk, and the desired color is set, the leaf and stalk drying process should begin. For this some growers use a relatively high temperature, while others use slow fires to complete the curing. The amount of sap in the plants, weather conditions, the type of barn and other factors may make it necessary to lengthen or shorten any of the stages of yellowing and curing.

5. BULKING: After tobacco is thoroughly cured, take down and bulk as much as possible. Bulking can be done on a raised platform in the barn. In most seasons, tobacco will be ready to go in the bulk the first part of November. If you bulk your tobacco when it is in proper order and cover it with clean bags, it will keep without damaging for several months. Some advantages of bulking are:

a. The color will improve and be more uniform.

b. Bulking prevents loss of weight, texture, and color which occurs when tobacco is left hanging in the barn after curing is completed.

c. Since tobacco will always be "in order" in the bulk, you can prepare it for market at any time.

d. You will be able to complete the marketing of your tobacco earlier.

These suggestions and recommendations are based on discussions with fire-cured growers and others.

DEATHS

PRISCILLA SUE COLE

Priscilla Sue Cole, 13-year-old daughter of Byron B. and Ruth Bingham Cole, of Appomattox, died Sunday in the Virginia Baptist Hospital, after an extended illness.

Born May 3, 1946, she graduated from the Appomattox Elementary School this year. She was a Brownie, and later a Girl Scout until ill health prevented her from taking part in these activities.

Survivors, besides her parents, include a brother, Byron (Benny) Cole, Jr.; paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben C. Cole, of Appomattox; and her maternal grandfather, J. Alec Bingham, of Lynchburg.

She was a member of Memorial Methodist Church, of Appomattox. Funeral services were conducted on Tuesday at 11 A. M., by the Rev. Richard A. Bergdoll, and the Rev. James T. Cravens. Miss Peggy Godsey provided organ music. Burial was in Liberty Cemetery. Pallbearers were Herbert Pulliam, Joe Legrand, Charles Martin, Joe Terry, George Bergdoll and Jimmy Torrence.

THE RULES OF FRIENDSHIP

1. Keep skid chains on your tongue; always say less than you think. Cultivate a low persuasive voice. How you say it counts more than what you say.

2. Make promises sparingly and keep them faithfully, no matter what it cost you.

3. Never let an opportunity pass to say a kind and encouraging thing to or about somebody. Praise good work done regardless of who did it. If criticism is needed, criticize helpfully, never spitefully.

4. Be interested in others; interested in their pursuits, their welfare, their homes and families. Make merry with those that rejoice, with those who weep, mourn. Let everyone you meet, however humble, feel that you regard him as one of importance.

5. Be cheerful. Keep the corners of your mouth turned up. Hide your pains, worries and disapointments under a smile. Laugh at good stories and learn to tell them.

6. Preserve an open mind on all debatible questions. Discuss, but not argue. It is a mark of superior minds to disagree and yet be friendly.

7. Let your virtues, if you have any, speak for themselves, and refuse to talk of another's vices. Discourage gossip. Make it a rule to say nothing of another unless it is something good.

8. Be careful of another's feelings. Wit and humor at the other fellow's expense are rarely worth the effort, and may hurt where least expected.

9. Pay no attention to ill-natured remarks about you. Simply live that nobody will believe them. Disordered nerves and a bad digestion are a common cause of backbiting.

10. Don't be too anxious about your dues. Do your work, be patient and keep your disposition sweet, forget self, and you will be rewarded.

NEWS REPORT FROM TOWN MAYOR

To The Citizens of the Town and County of Appomattox:

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Sept. 9. At this meeting an Ordinance was passed which suspends the operation of parking meters within the Town limits beginning Oct. 1st, and extending through Nov. 20th.

Since March of 1958, when the meters were installed, and put into operation, many complaints have been received every week, from the merchants and a large number of both town and county citizens. It is the intent of your Mayor and Council to do everything within their power to help promote the growth and progress of the Town of Appomattox and at the same time to promote peace and harmony if possible. I plead with all of you fine people to take a few moments and read the Ordinance pertaining to parking meters which was published in the Sept. 10th issue of The Times-Virginian, and which is published in this copy also.

The meaning of the Ordinance is that beginning Oct. 1st, 1959, a meter charge is no longer required to park. Let me plead with you again at this point and remind you that a one hour parking limit will be enforced in all zones where parking meters have been erected. Both your Mayor and your Council feel that this should give everyone ample time to park and shop. In the event you feel that your business transactions will require more than one hour, then I plead with you again to make use of either the Town Parking Lot or at some other parking space which is not in the zones where parking meters are.

On Monday, Sept. 21st, at 7:30 P. M., in the Court House, the Council will hold a public hearing pertaining to the extension of Sunnydale Ave., to a point where it will connect with Wembly Lane. All of the land owners and residents of these two streets have been notified of the meeting and it is hoped that all interested citizens will attend and express their views concerning same. I feel sure that after listening to testimony from all the people concerned that the Council will be in a position in the near future to make a decision concerning this matter.

I realize that during this time of the year that we are all busy but let's everyone make a continued effort to clean and beautify our premises and our community.

The regular meeting of the Town Council will be held in the Town Office on Monday, Sept .21st, following the public hearing at the Court House.

Your counsel and advice on all public matters is welcomed at all times.

Sincerely,

C. T. Moses, Jr.
Mayor, Town of Appomattox.

The Appomattox County Volunteer Firemen were called out late yesterday in response to the first alarm in several months.

NEW ASC RULES ON WHEAT ALLOTMENT.

As Appomattox County Farmers make plans for seeding next year's wheat crop, the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee sends out a reminder of a change in the law which may affect certain wheat allotments in the future.

ASC Chairman, W. D. Hix, III, says that under the new legislation, passed in August, a farmer who does not plant wheat for harvest in 1960 may nevertheless get credit for having planted that crop if he planted as much as 75 per cent of either his 1958 or 1959 farm allotment. Also, he will get full 1960 history credit if his planted wheat in either of these years plus any acreage placed in the Soil Bank equals 75 per cent of the allotment, the chairman explained.

If the foregoing requirement is not met, the farmer must plant 75 per cent of the 1960 allotment to get maximum history credit for that year.

Mr. Hix explained that certain other provisions of law with respect to wheat history credit are unchanged. For example, he said that a farmer planting within his farm allotment gets credit for his base acreage, but a farmer who exceeds his allotment gets credit only for the allotment. Also, farmers exceeding the allotment under feed wheat agreements gets credit only for the farm allotment in computing acreage history.

The ASC county office can explain any details on wheat history credit as they apply to an individual farm as well as recent program changes.
